

Red Day On Blue Street

Tony Banks

Advisory - the following lyrics contain explicit language:

They're kissing babies and telling me lies
They're taking over my television
They're making noises that sound so wise
Trying to influence my decisionRituals old fashioned
With speeches so proud and passionate
Hope reigns, fears rule
I may be crazy but I'm not such a fool
No such foolRed day on blue street
And this world promises everything
Old shoes on new feet
Again nothing changes
Red day on blue streetHere comes a man with a face so sincere
Here comes another with power on his mind
Both with a want for a word in my ear
Both with a message of hope for my kindHeads of this nation
Fight lies with misinformation
And this gives, that takes
One or the other for the difference it makes
None at allRed day on blue street
And this world promises everything
Old shoes on new feet again
Nothing changes
Red day on blue streetWe are the chosen ones
You have asked us to serve you
We deserve youIt's going the way that we said it would
We say that you never had it so good
No one's a loser who plays our game
The difference is clear, we just changed our name
Nobody knows that it's just the sameRed day on blue street
Or how about
Blue day on red street
It doesn't matter, it really doesn't

It doesn't matter, it really doesn't
Somebody showing me the magical way
Somebody waving the key to my chains
They must believe I was born yesterday
They must believe I've got sand for my brains
Members historical
Woo me with words rhetorical
Blood runs, mud flies
Can't see a thing for the wool in my eyes
In my eyes
Red day on blue street
And this world promises everything
Old shoes on new feet again
Nothing changes
Red day on blue street
This world promises everything
Old shoes on new feet again
Nothing changes
Red day on blue street
Street, promises everything
Old shoes on new feet again
Nothing changes
Red day on blue street
