Your Words

Battleships

See them turn towards the sun,
Though they know not what they do,
Till the day their race is run
Regardless if they know it too.

Have it now before it's done,
Take a look take all you see,
Nothing can be lost or won
Stuck in its own frailty

Lay me down as I move on
To the place where I belong
Everything you heard was wrong and your words made me strong

Can't you feel there's more than this?
More than just what you now see,
Ignorance is not quite bliss
After this eternity

What a world that you must own
What's the point I dare not dread,
Dense in thought as I walk home,
As your words filled up my head.
