

January

At Long Last

January

Turn around before you close your eyes; take a step back from the mesmerizing waterfront climbing up the edge Open up your pocket to reveal the faint, blank page that shows you how to get out of this alive Open up your closet just so that it can remind you, three more steps until the end of time
But soldier up trooper, just put on a smile
So I'll go ahead and take a stab in the dark, walk on eggshells, sing to the stars If January could come faster, all my cares would go through the floor I'd shine like gold, I wouldn't ask for more Now give me something to believe in because my hands are cold, my mouth is dry It's pretty odd and I'm looking for a reason, the clock ticks and the clouds seem to fly by With blistered toes and one left mistake, unspeakable doubts and unforgivable shame Grasp my hand as we approach the bend, light up our eyes and witness the end
