

I Hate Buffering

The Devil Wears Prada

Confidence blurred by arrogance
And the self worship continues
Who is an artist?
You can't decide for yourself Straight lines, I see straight lines
But they control sloppily, stupidly
Keep that golden, celebrity character
To your own conscience Take a breath and rest your jaw
A vertebrae with no spine
Take a breath and rest your jaw
A vertebrae with no spine Our entertainment, a mockery
With every laugh and every joke the actor's lungs
Become more dense with damnation
Don't mistake my intentions for superiority
Let's make that clear, let's make that clear This isn't right and the worst part is we're not pretending
Don't memorize these names eternally, eternally
This world will run dry and we'll watch the clock
We'll watch what we'll become
Don't memorize these names eternally, eternally Take a breath and rest your jaw
A vertebrae with no spine
Take a breath and rest your jaw
A vertebrae with no spine
