Little Kids

Deerhunter

Kids drinking gin on the, the front lawn The kids see that man walking down the dirt roadThese kids see the sky And they think of him dressed in flames Kids walk behind, slowly stalk that old manTo get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still These kids followed him into his shed Where he turns on the radio and smokes a cig These kids come ahead and gasoline They strike a matchTo get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older To get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get olderTo get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still get older still, to get older still To get older still, to get older still
