Rest Easy

Sam Thacker

picking up for all your pieces off the floors of broken dreams left to die in the back of your mind starring out a darkened window wondering what the future will not bring just leaves you tired and wanting more when I'm gone i want to rest easy count your blessings on your fingers and your hands your hands and feet may dance around the world a thousand times before you're gone but you never know

painted on an empty canvas so much space we leave unfilled no trace of color just black and white watching as the moments pass by with nothing done to make them yours ask is there anything left for me

waiting for your time to reach you don't you know there's chances every day what goods a dream if its left in your head leave all the light for someone else won't you be sorry baby wondering maybe

won't you be don't you see
