Release Me

Jack's Mannequin

I've been running such a long time
I've been hiding from the truth
I've been better, been broken, been buried
Now I'm death proof, death proof
And I've been known to take a big chance
But I can't waste another shot at redemption
Oh I'm ready, don't let me go passing through the wrong hands
The wrong hands
My confidence is in crisis mode
Your fingertips, well they know the code
Release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left
Come on release me, release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left
Unless you let go
Unless you let go
I've been waiting for the sun to shine
Another winter ends, the winter's starting over
We met beside a landmine, waiting for the wind to blow
Now I'm in trouble with these friends of mine
But change was in my blood, I lost my sense of direction

I drag us to the bright light
Life was like a TV show
My fuse is set, I'm pressing go
Your match is lit but it's burning slow
Release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left
Come on release me, release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left
Unless you let go
There will be nothing but sand falling down
Through your fingers to the ground below
Through your fingers to the ground below
Yeah, I've been running
I've been running
I've been running such a long time
Release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left

Come on release me, release me
Take another piece of me and there won't be another left
Unless you let go
Unless you let go
