

Surgery

Jimmy Robbins

I'll make a joke and she'll try not to laugh
As the men made of stone find their surgery masks
I head down the road or the linoleum floor
I really can't tell anymore
I see fluorescent clouds in a white tile sky
I see trees all around with name tags on their ties
She takes my hand, and the trees turn around and says, "promise you're coming back out"
Because I always believed you
When you swore to me, you'd pull through
So I plugged my heart into yours
A life support,
So see, you can't leave,
because I always believed I'll fall asleep, but she'll still be close by
In perscription dreams, everything seems alright
I head down the street or the linoleum floor
I really can't tell anymore
I feel a clean plastic breeze moving left of my ship
And the wind blows much harder when a man flips a switch
She takes my hand, and the wind comes to a stop she says "promise you're not giving up
Because I always believed you
When you swore to me, you'd pull through
So I plugged my heart into yours
A life support,
So see, you can't leave,
because I always believed
