

A Day By The Lake

Disillusion

Back at last from yearning slumber when the nightly drama came to a close
Hoping that fall will never come
 Salute the morning sun
 Inviting us to idleness
Hoping that fall will never come
 The hour calls for secrecy silently we'd slip out to the lake
Hoping that fall will never come
 And I stumble as of vertigo Can't await the sound of gentle waves melting with the rhythm of our crave. But today there are only elegies Filling our tainted elysium
Still hoping that fall will never come
 This place turned to a fraud mirage
 Deceitful and untrue.
Still hoping that fall will never come
 Embraces solace me
They hide my tears in pastel drapery
Still hoping that fall will never come
 And I cry just as you
 Knowing, this is coming to an end
But still I am hoping that fall will never come. But it came.
