What A Shame

Shinedown

Two packs of cigarettes a day The strongest whiskey Kentucky can make That's a recipe to put a vagabond On his hands and knees I watched it all up close I knew him more than most I saw a side of him he never showed Full of sympathy for a world that wouldn't let him be That's the man he was Have you heard enough? What a shame, what a shame To judge a life that you can't change The choir sings, the church bells ring So won't you give this man his wings? What a shame to have to beg you to See we're not all the same, what a shame There's a hard life for every silver spoon There's a touch of gray for every shade of blue That's the way that I see life If there was nothing wrong then there'd be nothing right And for this working man They say could barely stand There's gotta be a better place to land Some kind of remedy for a world that wouldn't let him be That's the man he was

Have you heard enough?
What a shame, what a shame
To judge a life that you can't change
The choir sings, the church bells ring
So won't you give this man his wings?
What a shame to have to beg you to
See we're not all the same, what a shame
God forgive the hands that laid you down
They never knew how
But your broken heart can break the sound
And change the seasons
Now the leaves are falling faster
Happily ever after

You gave me hope through your endeavors
And now you will live forever
What a shame, what a shame
To judge a life that you can't change
The choir sings, the church bells ring
So won't you give this man his wings?
What a shame to have to beg you to
See we're not all the same, what a shame
'Cause we're not all the same
What a shame, what a shame
'Cause we're not all the same
'Cause we're not all the same
