

It All Came Back Today

Tanita Tikaram

Well, he said it like he meant it but he did not really care
So I sat upon the Eve's embraces I was never there
No, I was never really fabled I was never really lost
I was cunning through this habit of mine You see all the words were lost
Yes, all the words were lost And you can stand upon your own life say it always seemed to seal
There were smiles upon the picture but I don't know what to feel
And I told a million stories and I sat down to risk half
But I never really meant it 'Til you came and stole my heart away
You came and stole my heart away And even if your real thought hid a thousand words away
And even if you never knew it all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today Well, the rain scales up and your soul is drowned
And mother's saying still raise a frown
And mother's saying still makes you see
What you have lost instead of me And even if your real thought hid a thousand words away
And even if you never knew it all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today And even though the starlight falls and takes your breath away
You still stare up towards the toss, I don't know what to say
I don't know how to be alone with some kind fret less friend
And even though the Harvest brings Well we all begin again
Yes we all begin again And even if your real thought hid a thousand words away
And even if you never knew it all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today
It all, all, all, all, all came back today I would like this sun be spoke until I find
I was all remembrance until the words got tired And even if your walk grows staring you got nothing left
I caught the stylist, the sun, the sources
There is a second breath to take
Yes there is a second
