

Retrospect

Conception

In cover of a dazzling full moon
I pace in the hall rendered harmless by the memory
 Of what I used to be night's soon over
 I dread another sunrise the pain of knowing
 I might have changed the world
I couldn't pass with a compromiseBut the healing hand belongs to the living
 And I am no longer
 The world will go on without me
I'm no longerWhen I leave I'll feel a soft asuagement
 And with minimal manliness
 I'll bow to hail the light when night's over
 I'll sink into oblivion but still I will remember
 I could have changed the world
I couldn't pass with a compromise'Cause the healing hand belongs to the living
 And I am no longer
 The world is the same without me
 I'm no longer
