A Tramp Shining

Richard Harris

She's called me again
And I've taken all my old forgotten hopes out of the closet
To put them on
I have found my crumbling crown
Lying where I tossed it
I thought that I had lost it

But here I am, a tramp shining

She's called me again
And I've gathered all my old forgotten dreams like dusty diamonds
To make a ring
Seated on my threadbare throne
I should straighten my bent sceptre
And pretend I could have kept her

And welcome her home, a tramp shining

I have found my crumbling crown
Lying where I tossed it
I was afraid that I had lost it

But here I am, a tramp shining

A brand new clown
A brand new clown
A brand new clown
