

The Devil You Know

Kestin Howard

So much for my thinkin'™, I thought you were the one.
But little did I know, Girl, that you were good as gone.

I knew you couldn't™ see them, but I could see his horns.
This evertongue got the best of you and now my heart is torn.

You tried to break it to me, that we've™ gone our separate ways.
But I didn't™ do no beggin'™, Girl, didn't™ try to make you stay.

I took all of our pictures, then watched them burn.
You took all of my dreams away, well now it's™ my turn.

Well, I may be just a sinner,
But I've™ always treated you like a saint.
Now you've™ gone and gave your hear your another,
And I'm™ sick and tired of tryin'™ to wait,

For you to go and change your mind,
When I know for a fact that you won't™.
And the Devil you know,
Is better than that devil you don't™.

So I went out looking for you, and Mr. "What's-His-Name",
So I could tell you what I think and put you two to shame.

I found you in a honkytong with a stage next to the bar.
So I bust on in, grab that mic, and pour out my heart!

Well, I may be just a sinner,
But I've™ always treated you like a saint.
Now you've™ gone and gave your hear your another,
And I'm™ sick and tired of tryin'™ to wait,

For you to go and change your mind,
When I know for a fact that you won't™.
And the Devil you know,

Is better than that devil you donâ€™t.

Iâ€™m moving on now, Baby, and I ainâ€™t gonna frown.
But with god as my witness, youâ€™ll never leave this town!

Well, I may be just a sinner,
But Iâ€™ve always treated you like a saint.
Now youâ€™ve gone and gave your hear your another,
And Iâ€™m sick and tired of tryinâ€™ to wait,
Yes I am.

For you to go and change your mind,
When I know for a fact that you wonâ€™t.
And the Devil you know,
Is better than that devil you donâ€™t.

But the Devil you know,
Is better than that devil you donâ€™t!

Yay-yeah,

So long, Baby..

Lyrics Submitted by Annelise Smith

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnllyrics.com/>