Strobe Life

The Bronx

Quiet like an elevator, even the walls are scared
I'm dependent on a generator, just to breathe in air
Medication, medication, signatures and stares
Watching all the lights come down, never wanting to careThese circles seem so strange
I run around and around, but nothing's changed
Medication, medication, signatures and staresI'm reinventing brand new lives like they were never there
I never want to run out, get more, can't stand waiting
I never want to run out, don't stop the lines from fading
It's time to wake up, I've been asleep for far too longIt's time to wake up before the pain, I feel is gone
I never want to run out
