Tomorrow Comes

Edie Brickell & New Bohemians

I can see miles above the clouds
And what was it like on the day you fell to earth?
Knocked you out cold it?s just as well
'Cause people are cruelest when they don?t know
Hello, hello
The ships are leaving late this evening
Hello, hello
You can?t deny that you don?t need it now
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
When all the stars are dying in the sky?
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
Only the satellites are circling tonight, tonight
I can see blood behind your eyes
And what was it like, on the day you knew you died?
Knocked up on things I don?t know why
'Cause people are cruelest when they won?t mind
Hello, hello
The ships are leaving late this evening
Hello, hello
You can?t pretend that you don?t need it now
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?

When all the stars are dying in the sky?
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
Only the satellites are circling tonight, tonight
Hello, hello
The ships are leaving late this evening
Hello, hello
You can?t deny that you don?t need it now
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
When all the stars are dying in the sky?
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
Only the satellites are circling
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
When all the stars are dying in the sky?
Where will we be when tomorrow comes?
Only the satellites are circling tonight
Satellites are circling tonight
What was it like just to have it all

Then it slipped right through your hands
How did it feel at that moment
When the earth stopped turning?
