Once More I'll Let You In

Norma Jean

You're out breaking new ground on the wrong side of town
But you cried and your conscience once more will get you down
Like an overgrown puppy with a sheep killing wind
You'll come knocking on my back door and once, I'll let you inOnce more I'll let you in and once more I'll forgive
'Cause life of pretend is the kind of life we live
When you say I love you, I start living again
So knock on my back door, once more, I'll let you inI know, I'll cry tomorrow but at least I smile today
You'll love me just enough, so I won't stray while you're away
I'll just keep on waitin' for the love that I can't win
So knock on my back door, once more, I'll let you inOnce more, I'll let you in So knock on my back door, once more, I'll let you in

Songwriters
Vic Mc AlpinPublished by
SONY/ATV TREE PUBLISHING

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/