Haven't Met You

Brett Eldredge

There's a half a million sunsets I haven't gotten to show you
Don't ask me how I know
But I know they steal your breath
And I can almost feel the feeling that you're gonna give me
Especially when you kiss me like no one ever has You're so real, I can't explain it
Don't keep me waiting
Thirty-thousand feet upon a plane
You could be the dream I always chased
Every second, every place
Always looking for your face
And I know it's one I'll never forget
So I guess I haven't met you yet
I saw two people talking in a corner booth cafe
Lookin' so in love
Maybe that can be us someday
I don't know what you're doing, I don't know where you are
But I swear girl when I meet you, you already have my heart
Thirty-thousand feet upon a plane
You could be a dream that I always chased
Every second, every place
Always looking for your face
And I know it's one I'll never forget
So I guess I haven't met you yetNot yet, I still haven't got to hold you
Not yet, I still toss around this place
Not yet, I still want you in my arms and out of my head
Thirty-thousand feet upon a plane
Where ever you are, I'm on my way
Every second, every place
Always looking for your face
And I know it's one I'll never forget
So I guess I haven't met you yet
Oh I guess I haven't met you yetI haven't met you, I have't met you, I haven't met you yet
