

Gypsy Lament

Inkubus Sukkubus

Sleep well, my Love
Sleep while the night sky weaves her spell
    Sleep without pain
Sleep though I yearn to have you near me
    The flames of all you were
        Have vanished in the ground
Sweet scented rosemary is scattered all around
    Wait just a while
For in no time we'll meet again
    Though you were gone
        Before we wed
I give blood to you earth, now take it to his own
    No fire or water deep
        Shall keep this bride from him
        He left me while
The seas were wild against the shore
    What foolish thief
        Would dare defy the hand of fate?
I love you now as I'll never love again
    The rocks beneath my feet
        Have sunken deep
        Earth to earth
        My love my own shall be
        Grow like the willow tree
        No sadness bring to me
He the man, and I the woman
    My love to me
        This shall be
