The Lines You Amend

Sloan

Said you'd found a way to end it peacefully
I remember finding shoes near the lake under a tree
And I'm sittin' on the shoreI thought I saw your charm float by
It doesn't matter now
'Cause all you wanted to do was die, yeahIf only you'd stuck around
I never would have made a sound
But now you're on the ocean floor
And I've opened a brand new door, brand new doorSwimming out to sea
Trying to find something else
While I'm skipping stonesAnd I'm listening to the shells
And I won't forget you
If someone else comes alongI found the words you wrote
But I would not dare to quote
My friends, the lines you amend
Like, "What's so bad about dying anyway"Swimming out to sea
Trying to find something else
While I'm skipping stones
And I'm listening to the shellsAnd I won't forget you
If someone else comes along
You'll always come to mind
Whenever I hear that song, yeahThe one about photographs
Sung by Ringo Starr
Especially in the chorus partYou always said, "Now don't you start"
Don't you start, yeah, yeah
Don't you start, don't you start

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/