

I Heart Roberts'

The Amity Affliction

We dance to this dead beat with eyes locked on the prize, this is our fatal disease; named you and me

It s killing us all won t you set it free?

I ll hang you on the wall and call you misery. So here s to you and here s to us, to everything that ever fell apart;
nights wasted getting wasted, days we lost to our mistakes So we ll never be lost til we re all alone and we ll never be wrong til we re on our own so wake up and we ll drink for two again.

And we ll never be alright til we read our wrongs and we ll never be done with these same old songs, so wake up we ll wait for you again (again) Like frozen appendages in boiling water, we re going to extremes and not getting warmer.

So hold your breath, and I ll do the same, are we just holding back those words we couldn t say?

So hold your breath I ll do the same, are we just holding back those words we I ll take the blame for your heart attack, and we ll sever these ties with a fucking pact

Through blood we share the world it s anybody s guess where we ll end up, our lives are just a fucking mess; and we re sinking So we ll never be lost til we re all alone and we ll never be wrong til we re on our own so wake up and we ll drink for two again

And we ll never be alright til we read our wrongs and we ll never be done with these same old songs, so wake up we ll wait for you again (again) He lays himself to rest even though he s making perfect sense his story goes untold; I read his words to see the end unfold

So we ll never be lost til we re all alone and we ll never be wrong til we re on our own so wake up and we ll drink for two again

And we ll never be alright til we read our wrongs and we ll never be done with these same old songs, so wake up we ll wait for you again
