

Green

Born Cages

Starry nights were passing
With beauty losing meaning
She told me all the troubles on her mind
She said, how can we survive
Without a laugh for miles
And so I gave her mine and told her all I know
You gave me green in a world without color
You gave me rain in the driest of summer
She said, "How long must you wait for the storm
To clear out from the road so you can see?"
But the sun will never shine
If you don't take the time
To look around and find it inside of you
You gave me green in a world without color
You gave me rain in the driest of summer
From the mountains to the ocean
Sound will find you and give you motion
From the hills, to the seas
A moving source of energy
To the heart of gold, of fame, of happiness
I raise a fist for loneliness
If you see what I see
You will have the strength to find the key
To get lost in the flame
It's much different than you claim to know
You will know, you will know
How can we survive
Without a laugh for miles
