

Half Dead

The Mountain Goats

Well it was raining outside so I cleaned the house today.

spent half of the morning throwing old things away.

Try not to get caught up try to think like a machine focus in on the task try not to figure out what it means

and I cannot get you
out of my head
lost without you
half-dead

took my spot at the window looked out at the road.

dots and dashes of traffic like a messaging code

of whole boxes of memories wrapped up at the curb,

I sang songs to myself,
didn't have any words.

and I cannot get you
half-dead

stole out to the backyard late last night.

pine trees frozen
in the silvery moonlight,

rising like giants
from the cold earth.

what are the years we gave each other ever gonna be worth?

and I cannot get you
half-dead
