Jerry

John Mellencamp

Jerry's yelling at the man in the moon
He's right outside of my window
He acts like a madman from time to time
I hope he brings it to a crescendo soonJerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moonJerry rides his skateboard down the street
He's thirty-seven years old with six children
He sees the world through a ten year old boy's eyes
He doesn't even notice that it's raining outsideJerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moonBut sometimes he cries
He wants me to console him
But I know that he's lying
About everything he's told meMan in the moon
Man in the moonJerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Says, he's prepared to suffer the consequences
What is his penalty for his immaturity?
Will he be cast into eternal darkness?Jerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moonJerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moon
Jerry's yelling at the man in the moonMan in the moon
Man in the moon
Man in the moon
Man in the moon

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/