

Don't Ask

Falls

Don't ask why it's time he goes
Some men take their reasons to the grave, you know
With a mind like an angel and a heart like a stone
He came into your life, but you still live alone
Those eyes of regret are burning bright
Second chances on his mind tonight
With a face of an angel and a will like a rock
She laid down that law like he never forgot
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Don't ask why she wouldn't say
Some things just work out a little better that way
Like a boat on the ocean, barely afloat
Taking chances on love
Why, nobody knows
This situations is getting out of control
Friends who end up lovers end up hurting each other, you know
But with a word, they are slipping
And a touch, they are gone
Back into each other's open arms where they belong
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Guess he never will
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Guess he never will
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
Guess he never will
Didn't know it then and he don't know it now
I guess he never will
