Mr. Harris

Aimee Mann

So he's retired

Lives with his sister in a furnished flat

He's got this suit that

He'll never wear outside without a hat

His hair is white but he looks half his age

He looks like jimmy stewart in his younger days. And honestly, I might be Stupid to think love is love

But I do

And you've waited so long and

I've waited long enough for you. My mother's calling

From where she's living up in troy, vermont

She tries to tell me

A father figure must be what I want

I've always thought age makes no difference

Am I the only one to whom that's making sense? And honestly, I might be

Stupid to think love is love

But I do

And you've waited so long and

I've waited long enough for you. The day I met him he was raking leaves

In his tiny yard.

Of course I know that

We've only got ten years, or twenty, left

But to be honest

I'm happy with whatever time we get

Depending on which book you read

Sometimes it takes a lifetime to get what you need. And honestly, I might be

Stupid to think love is love

But I do

And you've waited so long and

I've waited long enough for you.

Lyrics provided by

https://damnlyrics.com/