Mountains

Prose

Leae the keys under the mat, for the day I'm coming back, is it lonely when you wait on your own?
I've been holding up your sky, and it's hard to say goodbye, and I'm choking on the city smoke.It's draining tears from the man of stone, crumble like the mountain to the sea We'll never stand alone,
I may have left but I won't ever leave You may not understand, we didn't make the plan, we're only here to see how it ends.
I knew I had to go,
'cause our roads they led to wrong, you'll get promises of gold instead.Oooooo stay strong, while I'm goneIt's draining tears from the man of stone,
crumble like the mountain to the sea
We'll never stand alone,
I may have left but I won't ever leaveJust as long as I got you, then I don't wanna fan, if I have you,
they can take it all back from yeah just want you (just want you) to be next to you (next to you) I've done this all for youI think I owe you an apology 'cause when I met you I know I made you promises, I would always be there for you no matter what was stopping me, and honestly I meant every word, swear on my honesty.
Nothing could possibly mean more than you to me, but lately I ain't always been seeing you when you wanted me the irony of it is me writing this song is the same exact reason I ain't seeing you properly, well some of you is the reason that I'm doing it is that I'm hoping you can have a better life because of it, don't wanna go hunch, right now your only worry is nothing to do with money, is just for you to be comfortedIt's draining tears from the man of stone, crumble like the mountain to the sea
We'll never stand alone,
I may have left but I won't ever leaveIt's draining tears from the man of stone,

crumble like the mountain to the sea
We'll never stand alone,
I may have left but I won't ever leave
