

Coral Den

Midnight Movies

I watch those youthful paisley eyes.
They drink the screen just like a child. Your breath, a hint of intentions passing as windows in your heart. A patient eye, I wait for ours to land on mine and rest your head for just the time it takes to kiss your face one time and then you're gone again and I'll just meet you back inside us in an hour. Inhale your thought and sit with them, mulling them over and over.
I look and peek inside them and breathe idle until the end. I'll wait till then passing time, again. These patient eyes wait for yours to land on mine and rest your head for just the time it takes to kiss your face one time
and then you're gone again and I'll just meet you back inside us in an hour
