Sometimes I See

Michael Brecker

I cannot claim, life is more than a game
Sometimes I crave to behave in the absence of care
I know I'll never keep happiness there
Oh, but when he ran his hands through my hair
I stopped believing that winning by cheating's unfairAnd I have not seen life is more than a dream
Sometimes I seem to be fine in the absence of time
I know I'll never find reason or rhyme
More exciting than the sound of his sighs
I stopped believing this dream that I'm weaving is mine, ohTry with your vicious greed to cast off your need for me
Try to run free of me crawl on your knees for me
Why are you so afraid to lose what's not yours to save?
To savor the sweetest taste for freeI can't pretend love goes on without end
Sometimes I need to be free of a passion or three
I guess the fruit can't fall far from the tree
Dare I imagine what I might find waiting for me
Trust me I'll only be true to my own destinySo try with your vicious greed to cast off your need for me
Try to run free of me crawl on your knees for me
Why are you so afraid to lose what's not yours to save?
To savor the sweetest taste for freeSometimes, I see
