Raspberry

Baauer

Held in hands, a warm cup of skin
Always taken in by peers and friends
And the heightened fears over the years
Now I know I'm not like everyone
And in this head I see the ground you came from Unknown and undug from where you were staying
In a backyard bed until we came together
Raspberry in my hand, you feel alright
But I don't know if I am
Oh, I can't change what I am right now
But I'll be fine in the next life
I know I can say, I'm honest with myself
And with my red tasty gem
And sure they will try, but they can't take away
My secret loving friend
And on a good day, my mind is like the country
Green, wide open, a breath of zen
That's nice on the eyes, lonely, yeah
Without a prayer
Raspberry in my hand, you feel alright
But I don't know if I am
Oh, I can't change what I am right now
But I'll be fine in the next life
Take the trip that I have
I am at risk
But I guess you know
I guess you know
I guess you know
I guess you know
You know I guess
Explosions from the goldfish bowl
And visions of blue girls crying stars
The more the garden sings
The, the harder it gets to stay in
There are a lot of choices
So many voices ruling me
So many of them at once
Yelling, "Oh, everything's a mess"
I know

And you catch on a good day
Yeah, my mind is like the country
Green, wide open, a breath of zen
That's nice on the eyes, lonely, yeah
Raspberry in my hand, you feel alright
But I don't know if I am
Oh, I can't change what I am right now
But I'll be fine in the next life
