I Hear the Laughter

Leo Sayer

Listening to the falling rain
Always seems to bring her back again
I can remember like it was yesterday
Sound of her voice, her look upon her faceLike children playing children's games
We joked and laughed at every passing day
I'm so much older, things have changed
I've realized that now it's just too lateI hear the laughter echoin' through my brain
I hear the laughter then I'm alone againI've tried to forget her, heaven knows
Seems there's no direction left to go
I can remember like it was yesterday
I hear the laughter then I'm alone again
I'm alone again, alone, yeahI wish that I could hold you now
I wish that I could turn this all around
It's just my foolish fantasy
But that won't bring your sweet love back to meI hear the laughter, somebody calls my name
I hear the laughter and I can feel the pain
I hear the laughter echoing through my brain
I hear the laughter then I'm alone againI hear the laughter, I hear the laughter
I hear the laughter echoing through my brain
