

Notting Hill Gate

Reckless Sleepers

Notting Hill Gate
From one room
with two different views
An expatriate
shares her lament
and when the grey old ghost comes here to haunt you can remember as perfectly as you want

Notting Hill Gate
stirred in with her people never to separate but she heard the lie
before it left their mouths
She says that was my veneer It's long washed and sanded away

Notting Hill Gate
From one room
with two different views
An expatriate
speaks of her past She says a dream perhaps
I could mistake
But I will never again be more awake

Notting Hill Gate
She says this happens only when I drink
I start talking politics and my accent returns One stick burns another and the fire burns today but now it's in Notting Hill Gate

She was made when she didn't even know what for

but now she's madder
'cause she knows for sure and here's where she'll stay

Two views
but one obscured by trees
She must depend on memories
I wonder just how well she sees
I wonder just how well she sees

Lyrics Submitted by Richard Gagnon

Lyrics provided by <https://damnyrics.com/>