

All These Years

Adema

One got addicted and the other ran away
Some settle down a familiar place
One lets go the wheel while the other one steers
One got the money that the other put away
Some held the world and the others couldn't stay
A few just follow their dreams while the others stood clear
After all these years
One found religion and the other lost faith
One sold something that he never could replace
Both looked back to see if the coast was clear
One hits the bottle till his problems go away
The other never made it home from school that day
Sometimes I wish I could just disappear
After all these years
It feels like some days that the sun never shines
I can't decipher all these riddles and rhymes
They're going down in flames, they're burning alive
And I just can't take this anymore
One look back at the past and I'm finally here
(After all these years)
One got addicted and the other ran away
Some hold the world and the others couldn't stay
(After all these years)
One lets go the wheel while the other one steers
(After all these years)
One found religion and the other lost faith
One sold something that he never could replace
(After all these years)
Both looked back to see if the coast was clear
