Day After Day

The Ben Taylor Band

She likes to put on pretty things
And watch herself go walking by
If she turns her head just so much
Down her head and glances low
She'll see another womanBut she don't like early in the morning
Best to let her wake herself
If you can't respect her warning
You might wind up waking someone elseDay after day
And nothing ever seems to stay the same
Every time she's up she's almost down again
Day after day after day
There's nothing she can do to turn me awayJust within the limits of her dream
She's smoking tea with lazy queens
Wrapped in scarf's and draped in beads
She laughs out loud and sure enough
I can hear another womanWound up tight in the middle of the night
Company is hard to find
Long before the sky ever gets light
She holds her head and slowly starts to cryDay after day
And nothing ever seems to stay the same
Every time she's up she's almost down again
Day after day after day
There's nothing she can do to turn me awayDay after day
And everything seems to stay the same
Every time she's up she's almost down again
Day after day after day
There's nothing she can do to turn me away
