Rose Stained Red

Ari Herstand

Hey, I've been thinking about yesterday Now I just remembered how long its been since the day we playedHere Im here and its very clear that what is right is what I fear But I believe someday well be lazing peacefully underneath a tree and I will smile and you will speak itll be like our hearts never missed a beat Just when I leave promise to me youll leave your front door cracked just enough for meBecause I left without ever saying goodbye
I didnt even have time to thank your smile for beauty and love and giving me life Please lets return before wewaste away
everything that makes us sane Thats the wayLook at me beneath this tree I wont ever let free this last memory
I reenact the last supper of our bliss I leaned over the food and gave you one final kiss
Now theres nothing left and my last breath secures the love that has sealed my death Here revived we sit and this flower I pick to present to you Its a promising giftBecause I
I didnt even have time to thank your smile
for the beauty and love and giving me life
Please lets return before wewaste away
everything that makes us sane Thats the wayA beautiful flower will wither and die if the neighboring weeds choke the struggling cry for food and life and peace and soul A rose stained red deserves little more This haunted flower takes a tiny little breath and then is crushed away and receives a painful death But I believe you and me should return and live happilyBecause I
I didnt even have time to thank your smile
for the beauty and love and giving me life
Please lets return and well smile
