

Adherent

Paper Lights

don't let your truth get drowned in the waters that are left behind because the house is on fire and we're leaving everything in mind there's a sadness in embers rising up from what you've learned but somehow I find meaning in watching every timber burn If I could speak with my back exposed and waiting for your blade would you hear me without contempt awaiting to engage because the truth is on trial and I'm keeping everything inside because the house is on fire and I'm leaving everyone behind don't forget to always gain from everything you lose fall out of line open up your eyes before you have to chose because our hearts grow colder every step away from the flame and when the smoke all clears every truth has the same name
