More Than One Opponent

Choke

Suddenly, another weak breath, endless to ways to reenact the conflict within yours tmpers flare they seem to go unnoticed for the last time hold on tight sorry crossed my mind fearless it always seem so selfish faint refleciotn fallen from my eye takes a war to bring you down try to search for resistance fragile content unforeseen attenuation held together by my voice tearing through the crowd silent stare i'd always tell you to move forward confident to push broken glass aside it's hard for you to see i will always be close by hear me breating understand my attention change each moment who'S to blame who's to say what'S right and i will nothing feels this true in anguish accept our faults one last time patience expired fearless when we always seem to learn the hard way drop all pretentiousness takes a war to bring you down understanding before this gets too far -I start to see thing clearly now instead of on my own keeping things consistant a barrier broken though
