

Drone Operator

Jon Langford & Skull Orchard

I'm not really a soldier
I'm more likely to die
By car wreck or cancer
Than an eye in the sky
That follows them home
Right in through their window
They never know
They never know
When I was a young boy
I played all the games
Straight out of grad school
Someone gave them my name
So I drifted into
A job with good pay
Through traffic and construction
I drive in every day
Don't call me a coward
I know what is allowed
I'm like a god with a thunderbolt
Sitting on a big white cloud
I'm a drone operator
With targets to scan
I sit drinking coffee
With one eye on the ground in the tribal lands
I'm a drone operator
I am part of a team
I study my monitor
Wipe some dust from the screen
It didn't look like a wedding
It really wasn't my call
When it all was over
We went to a bar, drank beer and watched basketball
