Blame

Collective Soul

You pushed me down for all the world to see
I guess that's your price for my loyalty
So while you're tasting sin and swallowing pain
Don't look at me to take your blameWhen you're willing to render to the guilt you concede
When truth is your reason then lay that blame on me
When you unveil a conscience and with peace you agree
When love is your constant then lay that blame on meYou lay me out in hopes that I'd wilt away
But strength rained down and love provided shade
So, while the pageant of lies still glows from your tongue
Don't blame me for your kingdom comeWhen you're willing to render to the guilt you concede
When truth is your reason then lay that blame on me
When you unveil a conscience and with peace you agree
When love is your constant then lay that blame on meWhen you're willing to render to the guilt you concede
When truth is your reason then lay that blame on me
When you unveil a conscience and with peace you agree
When love is your constant then lay that blame on meQuestion your answers, your truth has no anger
Gather up your words, redemption now offered
Question your answers, your truth has no anger
Gather up your words, redemption now offered

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/