Shine

Daniel Lanois

I have wandered far and wide
All the way from Paris to Mexico
'Til I was gone and didn't knowIn the end, the thing that keeps me walking
Is your shine, your shine in the morning, your shine in the distance
Your shine inside the laughter and the ghostsThey have spoken of the river, forever bending
Inside the fever of the saints that walk all night with no domainIn the end the thing that keeps them walking, is your shine
Your shine when they wear no coat, your shine when the feelings low
Your shine when it's too late to turn aroundI have frozen up my dreams, thinking I was all alone
Fighting every minute for each turning stone
I have reached the rocket speed
I have touched the ground that feeds
Scaling fences, looking for the healing sunIn the end the thing that keeps me walking is your shine
Your shine in transmissions, your shine in decisions
Your shine when I labor to the new day
It's your shine, your shine, your shine, shine, shine on
