We've been in the rain
We've been on the mountain
We've been 'round the fire In fancy hotels
Drank water from farm wells
We sang with the choir I kissed your dry lips
We jumped off the high cliffs
And splashed down below Skin to skin
In the salty river
Made love in the shadows Read books to each other
Read the mind of the other
Flew one thousand jets We laughed and we cried
At movies and real life
And our ridiculous bets We danced in the moonlight at midnight
We pressed against back doors and wood floors
And you never faked it And frequently
We ignored our love
But we could never mistake it We met on the front porch
Fell in love on the phone
Without the physical wreck You gave me the necklace
That used to hang
Around your mothers neck We questioned religions
Gave bread to the pigeons
We learned how to pray We stood by the ocean
Turned our hearts into one
We laid in bed all day We skipped on the sidewalk
Skipped stones on the water
We skipped town We seen the sunrise with new eyes
We seen the damage of gossip and true lies
We've seen the sun go down Had passionate makeouts
With passionate freakouts
We built this world of our own It was in the back of a taxi
When you told me you loved me

And that I wasn't alone
