

Where I Stand

The Jay Sekulow Band

What I see from where I stand
I can't begin to comprehend,
I wake in fear just to think
How far some people will descend
And what is now has been before
Over and over it's been ignored
It is a heart, without a soul, that slaughters innocence, the end
Becomes the means, a twisted faith, to justify a violent need.
Guided by lies that deceive
Nothing the eyes should ever see.

Now my heart is crying deep beneath the voices lying
I can't stand to see this evil anymore
And while the world is sleeping,
We're condemned for just believing
I can't stand to see this evil anymore

The true intent has been laid bare
I can't pretend it's just not real.
The time is now we must be strong and not allow it to prevail
Father in heaven hear our prayer
Strengthen your souls lost in despair

And now my heart is crying deep beneath the voices lying,
I can't stand to see this evil anymore
And while the world is sleeping,
We're condemned for just believing
I can't stand to see this evil anymore

Are we blind to all of this, in an effort to appease?
This restless feeling of unease.

Now my heart is crying deep beneath the voices lying
I can't stand to see this evil anymore
And while the world is sleeping
We're condemned for just believing
I can't stand to see this evil anymore
No I can't stand this evil anymore

Anymore
