Abigail

Sosos

I never thought of you just as a tree
That grows and grows just to shed its leaves
I imagined you as a porcelain beauty
Smooth and strong you demand to be seen
But time has a way of forgetting
All the things we never see
So I plant a seed and watch it flower
Into a face I?ll never see

So now Abigail you never were one to complain much
And Abigail you never were the one that I could touch
Abigail you never were all the things that I could love
Abigail you never were

I didn't see you as this fragile being
That sways and falls from the slightest breeze
I never thought you could leave so soon
Without the slightest chance to ever see us bloom
Our moment cut short but not by our choice
Without enough time to ever hear your voice
So I lie awake at night realizing things are what they seem
Waiting to feel you close now only in my dreams

So now Abigail you never were one to complain much
And Abigail you never were the one that I could touch
Abigail you never were all the things that I could love
Abigail you never were

So now Abigail you never were one to complain much
And Abigail you never were the one that I could touch
Abigail you never were all the things that I could love
Abigail you never were
