

My Father's Shoes

Leon Russell

What can I say to this child of my own
When he looks up to me for the answers?
He's got trust in his eyes and such innocent ways.
What all the words I can say? Can I tell him of my life
And can it be used for his own life's goal
And example to follow and finally remember someday?
What all the words I can say? I could say I once was a boy just like you
And I understand, the things you're feeling.
The grey hair and lines on my face just might say
The old man is always acting that way. And now I think of my daddy
He wore these kind of shoes
And after all this time
I think I know him
