This is Not Your Home

Hilary Weeks

I close the door
But you let yourself back in
I let you go
You find me again
You enter my heart, uninvited
And I recognize all the signs
You fill up my eyes
You roll down my cheeks
Take over my heart, piece by piece by piece
But you're just passing through
You're gonna have to leave soon
You need to know
This is not your home
Every now and then
You change your name
I've heard you called heartache
Some call you sorrow or pain
You come like a breeze and settle on me
And sometimes like a storm without warning
You fill up my eyes
You roll down my cheeks
Take over my heart, piece by piece by piece
But you're just passing through
You're gonna have to leave soon
By now you must know
This is not your home
You bring the tears
The tears release my pain
So in a way, I have you to thank
But now I must
Dry my eyes
Wipe my cheeks
Reclaim my heart piece by piece by piece
Cause I need to breathe again
I have to let the sunlight in
God didn't make my soul
To be your home
This is not your home
