Junkyard Heart

Juliette Lewis

You dont look the same
The innocence has gone from your eyes
And you walk like nothing
Pleases you
Like nothing could ever leave you the way I left you
And I bet you, I bet youre gonna have to learn this the hard way like I didYouve got something to hide, oh youve got something to say to me dont you
Youve got something to hideYoure moving through glass alone
Youre moving through glass too slow
Youre moving through glass alone
Youre moving through glass too slow
Who is the runner, who is the gunner in this charade weve created
Youre moving through glass aloneWere like two lost birds circling outside a dirty window
And I hope you find whatever it is youre searching for this time
I got an idea you could gather all the parts of your junkyard hearts and make a collage
Something to remember the good timesYouve got something to hide, oh youve got something to say to me dont you
Youve got something to hideYoure moving through glass alone
Youre moving through glass too slow
Youre moving through glass alone
Youre moving through glass too slow
Who is the runner, who is the gunner in this charade weve created
Youre moving through glass alone
I dont think you know, you knowYou walked away like it never meant a damn thing
Youre moving too fast too fast too fast too fast
Who is the runner, who is the gunner in this charade weve created, youre moving through glass alone, I dont think you know
You blew my mind, you blew my mind when you left me without anything
You sealed your fate, my friend
