

When I Watch You Sleeping (Solo)

Neil Young

When I watch you sleeping there is nothing that you hide When I smell you breathing there is a sweetness from inside And when I feel you stirring And the day is about to brake outside wings are warring and the skies are there to take I wonder how I got so close to you and see the chances that you take without thinking I am going there too these are the promises you make when your eyes are blinded by love and the history of fate When I hear you purrin' like a kitten and a lion and I feel your softness how you got in without trying then you role and tumble with your dreams still holding on and I hear that rumble in the stomach of the dawn today I paint my masterpiece tonight I trace my tears thinking through my path to you and where I stumble through the year today I paint my masterpiece
tonight I trace my tears thinking through the road I took to you and how I stumble through the year that's when I knew I never had hold you down repeating all roads and fears now the crows are calling and the blackbirds sing in my ear you got one eye open and I am smiling through my tears but you will never see them they are inside with my fears in a place that's fading away taking on the years
