Right On Time

O.a.r. (of A Revolution)

I know it's been a long, long year.
God forbid you listen to me now.
I may have laid the pressure on good, but since that day
I'll never ask again.It's funny, it's come right down to this.
I have to steal my time cause you won't give it up for free.
I've been talking to the Moon all night, but the Stars won't say nothing to me.
And though I feel it's easy for a man to grow up
Much harder for a man to grow out.
You may not appear, but I'm standing right here my God.
I'll never ask you,Where have you been?
You could have told me just,
Where have you been?
If you know me you know
I wont ask why.
They always told me you'd be right on my time.
We're coming around.I know you're busy right now.
Been a day, but I haven't heard your call.
I climbed a mountain just to get a better view of you.
But I'll never ask again.It's crazy that we just can't feel the same
And lay down for awhile.
And let life catch your eye.
I've been relaxing with the Wind all day,
But the Sky won't open up for me.
And though I feel it's easy for a man to stand tall.
Much harder for a man to simmer down.
You may not appear, but I'm standing here my God.
I'll never ask you,Where have you been?
You could have told me just,
Where have you been?
If you know me you know
I won't ask why.
They always told me you'd be right on my time.
If you give me just a minute of your day,
I see now why you choose to stay away.
Up here life seems more like living,
And living mirrors love.
And love just leaves me breathless.
On we go.I'll never ask you,
Where have you been?-a
