The Tide Has Turned

Imaginary War

We both knew that this will happen
I knew it right from the start
The wish, the day would never come, for every one wasn't overdone, But like you I still repressed it till the day you stood at my door

The world didn't revolve anymore

The tide has turned
My heart bleeds for you and yours bleeds for me too
We are the burned

The tide has turned
The pain in vain, very again
We are the concerned

So awful sleepless nights you'll get You become lost in the mirror cabinet
And the only thing you want to burn is a cigarette, where the silhouette starts in smoke and ends in a joke and in the end you stub it out and you run away till you pay for every day
