Switching Off

Elbow

Last of the men in hats hops off the coil And a final scene unfolds inside Deep in the rain of sparks behind his brow Is a part replayed from a perfect day Teaching her how to whistle like a boy Love's first blushIs this making sense? What am I trying to say? Early evening June This room and a radio play This I need to save I choose my final thoughts today Switching off with youAll the clocks give in And the traffic fades And the insects like a neon choir The instant fizz Connection made And the curtains sigh In time With youYou, the only sense the world has ever made Early evening June This room and radio play This I need to save

Switching offRan to ground for a while there
But I came off pretty wellYou, the only sense the world has ever made
This I need to save
A simple trinket locked away
I choose my final scene today
Switching off with you

I choose my final scene today
